ICOM 25th General Conference
Museums as Cultural Hubs – The Future of Tradition

Kyoto, Japan, September 1-7, 2019
icom-kyoto-2019.org

The 25th ICOM General Conference will take place less than eight months from now. Early bird registration has already opened in January 2019, so please save the date, start planning your participation in the Kyoto’s unique conference programme and allow yourself to discover the museums, cultural and natural heritage of Japan.

CAMOC’s annual conference within ICOM Kyoto will be held between September 2 and 5, 2019. For the Kyoto meeting, CAMOC has established several very interesting partnerships – with the Regional Alliance ICOM-ASPAC (sessions scheduled for the afternoon of September 2) and the ICOM-DEMHIEST International Committee (scheduled for the afternoon of September 3) – and prepared the programme overflowing with ideas, experiences and inspiration – just like the Kyoto city itself! Moreover, with its Japanese Institutional Members’ support, CAMOC will organise an off-site meeting at the Museum of Kyoto on September 5 and a post-conference overnight trip to Tokyo on September 8.

The CAMOC’s conference will be developed under the umbrella theme of the General Conference – Museums as Cultural Hubs. This call contains four sections announcing the thematic orientation of our sessions and grant possibilities for our members. We invite all those interested to submit proposals for the sessions on September 3 - 5 (the sessions jointly organised with ICOM-DEMHIEST, the CAMOC sessions and the off-site meeting at The Museum of Kyoto). Joint Session on September 2, organized together with ICOM-ASPAC, will have a different format based on panels of invited speakers rather than the Call for Papers.
Call for Papers

The 2019 CAMOC Annual Conference will take place in Kyoto, on September 2-5, during the 25th ICOM General Conference. The Kyoto conference will be CAMOC’s third conference in Asia, following the two general conferences in Seoul (2004) and Shanghai (2010). It is a pleasure to present the call for papers for our annual meeting.

The conference will bring together a diverse range of viewpoints on city museums, by stakeholders which include city museum professionals, curators, researchers, academics, city governance representatives, students, NGOs. We hope these stakeholders and others interested in the relationship between a city and its museum will benefit from this opportunity to connect.

The exciting theme of CAMOC 2019 Annual Conference, City Museums as Cultural Hubs – Past, Present and Future, is the catalyst for the diversity of participants we are seeking this year as we look to examine the potential of connections between past and future. To be able to discuss this, we will go back to root definitions of a city museum; we will address and revisit tradition(s) in order to contemplate and envision where we are going in the future. A changing world means changing cities, and changing issues to be faced. Stepping back to address the definition of a city museum is therefore imperative.

What are the most relevant issues that challenge city museums? What are the solutions? These questions will be open to discussion in order to ultimately provide city museums with strength and potential for the next decade. As this international conference is taking place in Kyoto, an ancient but vibrant city of culture, this will be the opportunity to examine the mentioned internationally relevant issues and their reflections in a particularly inspiring local context.

CONFERENCE THEMES AND SESSIONS

Monday, September 2, 2019

Session 1 – Joint Session with ICOM-ASPAC
Cultural Tourism, City Sustainability and Museums of Cities
The session will be held in cooperation with ICOM-ASPAC and will be an opportunity to engage with the unique and diverse voices from the countries of the Asia and Pacific Region, around the themes of developing and managing cultural tourism, as well as the theme of city sustainability and museums of cities. This session will be based on the participation of invited speakers from both committees and other speakers by invitation.
Organisers: CAMOC and ICOM-ASPAC

Session 2 – CAMOC Workshop
City Museum Trends: Active collecting & activating collections
CAMOC has been working on the identification of what types of museums are to be considered city museums and their major trends. These activities will continue at the annual conference in Kyoto 2019 through our dedicated sessions 2 and 5. The present session will unfold in a presentation/workshop format and focus on exploring active collecting as one of the emerging approaches in the city museums of today. The presentation will enlighten theory and practice about why and how active collecting and activating collections can support social change and therefore are an important step forward for city museums. During the interactive part of this session, participants will be challenged to work on active collecting models to be applied in their museums. The results will be directly used in the CAMOC’s wider, multi-year project about the global city museum mapping planned to begin in 2019/2020.

Joint Meeting with ICOM-DEMHIST
On the day two of the conference, there will be a Joint Meeting of CAMOC and ICOM-DEMHIST, the committee specialized in historic house museums. The joint sessions will focus on museums as “cores”. “Cores” represent one facet of the key concept of “cultural hubs” within the General Conference theme. To investigate museums as “cores” means exploring how museums – both museums of cities and house museums – invigorate communities at the local level.
“Tradition” has a deep relationship with the verification of identity of nations, regions and communities. At the same time, as the etymology of the word indicates, tradition has a connotation directed to the future (the word derives from the Latin verb tradere – to transmit, to hand over).
The theme of conveying tradition will be explored through our joint sessions, on different scales – the one of the city, and the one of a historic house. We look forward to tackling the questions of how traditions are rediscovered and reexamined, preserved and shared, and even invented.

Session 3 – City and house museums in the context of revising museum definition

In this session, we will explore challenges of working within the existing, historical urban tissue and physical structures to explore how buildings, historical landscapes and “traditional” museum collections change and adapt to the contemporary museological paradigm shift, where museums are no longer merely about, but, importantly, also for their cities and communities. ICOM Executive Board has already decided that it is time to rethink and revise the existing museum definition.

The foreseen topics for the discussion include: contemporary challenges in architectural conservation, use and design; changes in city and house museum management; innovative use of historical collections and narrative for engaging with communities, community outreach, blending of new community experiences (e. g. immigrant populations) with the historical narrative, to name a few.

CAMOC Meeting and General Assembly

On its third conference day, CAMOC will examine how museums of cities engage with multiculturalism, through the session organised with the support of the Tokyo Metropolitan Art Museum.

Session 4 – Reconsidering Multiculturalism: Coping with different ‘diversities’ in museums of cities

The session will explore how museums of cities have been addressing multiculturalism and its challenges and compare different museum theories and practices of responding to multiculturalism, in order to develop a balanced understanding of the role of museums in the increasingly multicultural world.

The concept of multiculturalism varies across countries, reflecting different degrees and trajectories of human migration in / from each country. Museums in some countries have been engaging with multiculturalism already for several decades, even developing a theoretical shift in their agenda: from social inclusion, through multicultural education, to intercultural dialogues. In other parts of the world, museums have only recently begun dealing with multiculturalism and are currently in the process of establishing cultural groups to work for and / or with. There are also countries where museums do acknowledge the importance of multiculturalism but have yet to determine how to deal with it. Given such variegated circumstances, it is instrumental to avoid adopting a single museological solution to multiculturalism to apply to all the museums of cities across the world. Rather, it is important to critically compare different museum theories and practices of responding to multiculturalism in different regions, so a balanced understanding of the role of museums in the increasingly multicultural world can be reached.

CAMOC General Assembly

CAMOC Off-site Meeting

On the final CAMOC conference day, our offsite meeting at the Museum of Kyoto will take place. The full-day meeting will include paper presentations from both Kyoto and international participants. The definition(s) of city museum, the role of city museums in terms of sustainability, the relationship between city museums, local communities and urban development will be discussed.

In addition, specialized museum visits have been planned, as well as an opportunity for the participants to get to know a vibrant part of the historical Kyoto as an inspiring meeting setting.

Session 5 – Museums of Cities, Trends and Definitions: Connecting urban past and present, responses to urban issues

CAMOC has been working on the identification of what types of museums are to be considered city museums and their major trends. The work on trends in city museums and the new possible definition(s) will continue at our annual conference in Kyoto 2019 through this dedicated session and other activities (Session 2 in form of a workshop). The results gathered will be directly applied in the wider project about the global city museum mapping to begin in 2019/2020.

Session 6 – Museums of Cities and Sustainable Urban and Local Community Development

In this session, we will explore the role of museums of cities in terms of sustainability, where the relationship between city museums, local communities and urban development will be discussed. The session will be bringing together case studies, methodologies and practices from different parts of the world.
